

Subject Line: A new kind of dual enrollment is coming to our school

Body copy:

I'm excited to announce a new academic opportunity for our students: Outlier Dual Enrollment courses. Take a peek at this trailer for the Intro to Financial Accounting course. The courses are beautiful and taught by experts from across each field.

Outlier is unlike any dual enrollment program we've seen before:

- Credit-bearing courses transcribed by the University of Pittsburgh—a top 50 school!
- Cinematic online lectures integrate technology into the learning experience
- 100% online and asynchronous: Schedule courses during any class period
- Educators facilitate Outlier courses: Leave the grading and lesson planning to Outlier!
- Real-time visibility into student progress

While Outlier courses are online and asynchronous, they will integrate with our existing school schedule. Each course will have a dedicated class period and an educator to facilitate.

Why add this new program now? We want to help all of our students succeed and find themselves on a pathway to college, a meaningful career and long-term economic security. More students are turning to dual enrollment to earn early college credit, saving them money and letting them practice the skills they'll need in college and beyond. And that's something we can all get behind.

As we prepare to roll out these courses, you can learn more about Outlier in this brochure.
